The ball was a colorful affair, with hats and noise-makers and tissue paper snowballs adding to the gayety. The ball was the last gesture of Marion Council's entertainment program that was enjoyed by the largest convention in the history of the Ohio Council.

Last night's dance followed the close of the business sessions in Star Auditorium yesterday when Toledo won the 1929 state convention and all present state officers were reelected for a third year.

The reelected officers include: State Deputy Haas, State Secretary Gorman, State Treasurer E. T. McCue of Middletown, Warden E. P. Fitzgerald of East Liverpool and Advocate Grattan Egan of Wellsville.

HURTS TRADE

Japanese Invasion of Northern China Causes Drop

Washington, May 22—The Japanese invasion of northern China is affecting American foreign trade, a radiogram today to the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache Arnold at Peking, said.

"In North China," the message said, "all railway lines are hampered by military activities. The situation is generally depressive to trade and has led to the failure of several of the smaller Peking banks."

Exports to the United States in April totaled $3,940,000 compared with $4,500,000 from China in the corresponding month of 1927.

Late Senator's Manager Cites List of Contributors to Fund

Washington, May 22—Ohio's presidential campaign came under the Senate's Presidential Funds Committee's spotlight today.

Carmi Thompson, manager of the late Senator Willis' campaign against Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover testified $41,216 was expended on behalf of Willis.

Ex-Senator Atlee Pomerene, Ohio's favorite son candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, declared he spent but $100, which was used in Cleveland where a contest developed over one of his delegates.

Thompson said only $14,117.43 was spent before Willis death and his organization stopped the fight after that. The expenditures made later, he explained, were for bills contested before Willis died and for traveling expenses.

Lists Contributors

"Outside of traveling expenses, I can say that no contract was made to spend money after Senator Willis, death," said Thompson. "Some contracts, entered into and carried out before his death, were paid for afterwards."

Thompson said the Willis organization received $15,300 before Willis'

COUNTY OFFICE RULING SOUGHT AT CONFERENCE

Recorder Problem To Come Before Meeting at Columbus Wednesday

LAW NOT CLEAR

Attorney General Asked To Decide How Successor to Smith Should Be Named

The Board of County Commissioners, Prosecuting Attorney Frank Wiedemann, and perhaps County Auditor Earl E. Thomas will meet with representatives of Attorney General Edward C. Turner at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning to obtain a ruling relative to filling the office of county recorder.

The county was left without the services of a recorder on April 29 when Charles E. Smith, 25, mysteriously disappeared from the city.

Due to the vagueness of the statutes governing the office of recorder, as far as the present case is concerned, the commissioners decided to obtain a ruling from the attorney general's office.

The commissioners met yesterday afternoon to consider plans of replacing Smith. Attending the meeting were O. W. Kinnamon, chairman, O. J. Hord and W. M. King, of the Board of Commissioners, Frank Wiedemann, prosecuting attorney, Earl E. Thomas, county auditor, and T. W. Jones, state examiner in charge of the inspection of Smith's records.

Not Clearly Defined

Just what constitutes a vacancy in the recorder's office is not defined by law. Nor do the statutes specify who is to declare the office vacant. The statutes states only that in the case of an appointment, the appointee is to serve until his successor is duly elected and qualified. The case becomes involved, however, due to the fact that Smith's term does not expire until Jan. 1, 1931, more than three years after the next general election.

The commissioners hope to get a ruling as to whether they shall appoint a new recorder to serve until the expiration of Smith's term or until Jan. 1, 1929. In the latter case it will be necessary to elect a recorder this fall. Ordinarily there would have been no election of a recorder until the general election in 1930.

Get Extension

County recorders elected in 1926 were given one year and four months additional to their terms when the state legislature changed the date for beginning their term of office. This extender runs their term of office past one general election and as a result leaves authorities here in a quandary as to filling the vacancy in Smith's office.

SWING-JOHNSON BILL TAKEN UP BY HOUSE

Need Recommendation of President Coolidge; Passage Is Seen

Washington, May 22—Heeding the recommendation of President Coolidge and fearful of a new flood disaster being laid at its door, the House today took up the Swing-Johnson bill for the building of Boulder Canyon Dam on the Colorado River.

With the threat of filibustering tactics met by the firm decision of leaders to bring the bill to a vote, all indications pointed to its passage within three days.

In an effort to relieve the federal government of the cost of flood protection, sponsors of the bill evolved the scheme of building a 550-foot dam on the river between Nevada and Arizona, generating electricity, and selling water both for irrigation purposes and for domestic use in southern California cities.

"Smilin' Through," Senior Class Play, on Program at Grand Theater Wednesday

Members of Harding High Graduating Class To Appear in One of Most Difficult Productions Ever Staged by Local Talent; Afternoon and Night Performances Scheduled

With Miss Anna Von Endt, Robert Elliott and George Stafford in the leading roles of "Moonyeen Clare," "John Carteret" and "Kenneth and Jeremiah Wayne," "Smilin' Through," a romantic comedy comprising a prologue and three acts, will be presented by seniors of Harding High School, Wednesday, at the Grand Theater. Performances are scheduled for 3:15 and 8:15 p. m.

Miss Lucile Foreman, dramatics instructor of Harding High School, is directing the play, to be given by a cast of 18 characters, all chosen from the senior class at Harding.

The play, one of the most difficult ever attempted by an amateur group here, requires in particular, skillful portrayal of character on the part of Miss Von Endt, who shifts from a girl of the present day to one of 50 years ago in the various scenes, and on the part of Robert Elliott and Robert George, who as "John Carteret" and "Dr. Owen Harding," enact the double roles of old men in the first act and of young men of 50 years ago in the second, and young men again in the third. Miss Von Endt's role was taken by Jane Cowl on the stage and Norma Talmadge in pictures.

Special Scenery

The stage setting for the play, from Armbruster's, Columbus, will be particularly elaborate, representing the beautiful Carteret garden. Period costumes are being furnished by the Emilie Sullivan Studio, Columbus, and the play is being presented through special arrangement with Samuel French of New York City.

The other characters are: Miss Ann Beth Pohler, Sarah Wayne; Miss Mary Titsworth, Mary Clare; Miss Margaret Schlientz, Ellen; Edward Sloan, Willie Ainley; Misses Elma Sage, Edna Keiselring, Gertrude Giddings and Eleanor Pfeiffer, and Donald Hunter, Hugh Wright, Walter Moore and William Guthery, wedding guests.

Assisting with the presentation are Roland Snow, stage manager; Harold Waddell, business manager and Arthur Cheney, assistant business manager. E. H. Shade is the faculty business manager and Misses Priscilla Smith, Margaret Wolfley and Mary Heiphrey, Harding instructors, have been selected to assist back-stage. Music between acts and an overture will be furnished by an eight-piece High School Orchestra directed by Howard M. Temple, music supervisor in the city schools.

MINING TOWN BURIES BLAST VICTIMS TODAY

Services Are Held in Village Square with Catholic and Protestant Rites

FIND ONE MAN ALIVE

Hope Given Up by Rescue Crews That Others Are Not Dead

Mather, Pa., May 22 — Community funeral services were to be held in this little mining village today for the 60 victims of the Mather Colliery explosion whose bodies have been recovered from the blast-wrecked mine.

The services were to be held in the village square, with a chorus of voices, and both Catholic and Protestant ceremonials.

Catholic services were to be held first with a visiting priest in charge, while in the afternoon Rev. C. G. Aldrich, pastor of the Christian Church, the only church here, was to preside. Twenty other ministers from nearby villages were to visit the homes of the bereaved.

Convinced that no life remains today among the victims of the Mather Colliery explosion still in the mine, rescue crews began the task of locating and removing the bodies of the last of the 197 victims.

Find One Man Alive

One man, Frank Krubick, 55, was found alive in the depths of the mine today—miraculously saved from death when gas fumes and fire swept by his niche in the coal and rock.

Fourteen others escaped shortly after the explosion Saturday, but one was so badly hurt that he died yesterday. Officials felt certain these are the only survivors.

The slow, gruesome task of digging out the bodies buried within the mine was begun. It will take days—maybe a week or more—before they are all recovered.

Sixty-nine bodies had been removed today—58 identified, and 11 burned and mangled beyond recognition.

SOCIALIST PARTY TO FACE CABINET FIGHT

Nationalists To Wage War on Victors in German General Election

Berlin, May 22—Embittered by their rout in the general election, leaders of the Nationalists today began making preparations to wage war against the Socialists when the new cabinet and the new Reichstag comes into power next month.

Count Westarp and his fellow leaders of the radical faction of the Nationalists predict that the next cabinet will not last long and that the new Reichstag will encounter continued obstacles.

While the Communists gained seats in the Reichstag, there is little likelihood of any Communist being taken into the government. Predictions are being made that the "grand coalition" will consist of Socialists, Democrats, Catholic Center Party, Bavarian Peoples' Party and the German Peoples' Party. Foreign Secretary Stresemann is one of the leaders of the German Peoples' Party.

Leaders of the victorious Socialist party declared they would work for European peace and harmony.

Ordinance for Motor Transportation Service Passed by Unanimous Vote

CALLED MEETING

Buses To Start on or Before Oct 5 When Street Car Franchise Expires

By a unanimous vote, City Council at a called meeting last night passed the ordinance providing for establishing of bus lines to replace the present city street car service and at the same time awarded the bus contract to the Maag Brothers Transit Co., of this city. The meeting was called by the franchise committee of Council.

The ordinance was adopted after having been brought up for passage at two previous meetings. Each time the measure was held up by Councilman Wilkins of the first ward, who clung to the hope that something could be done to retain the street car service, explaining his position by saying that the residents of the First ward did not want the bus lines in place of the street cars.

The matter was brought to a definite head at a meeting of C., R. & M. officials and members of City Council last week, when it was announced by the street railway men that the city car service would positively be discontinued upon the expiration of the present franchise, Oct. 5.

Threats of refusing to grant the company a new franchise for operating interurban cars over the city streets unless it also operated city cars, proved ineffective when it was explained by A. F. Van Deinse, president of the C., R. & M., that the company would gladly discontinue the interurban lines also, except that it must first secure permission from the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio.

The franchise ordinance passed by council last night, which must be accepted in writing by the Maag Broth-

FIRST CIRCUS DUE HERE WEDNESDAY

Hagenbeck-Wallace Show Is Scheduled To Arrive About 5 A. M.

Circus Day will hit Marion with full force about 5 o'clock Wednesday morning when the long train carrying the Hagenbeck Wallace show pulls into an Erie siding near Greenwood-st.

The circus will come in from Ashland, where it is showing today. From Marion the Pennsylvania railroad will carry the clowns, the elephants, the side shows, and the pink lemonade to Sandusky.

With fair weather promised for Wednesday, youngsters and grown-ups alike are beginning to feel the call of the circus. The throngs that formerly lined the streets to watch parades will have to be satisfied to watch unloading and loading activities this year. There will be no parade here Wednesday.

No sooner will the train grind to a stop Wednesday morning than activity will begin. And in a short time squads of sledge swingers will be driving stakes for the "big top" on the Drake circus lot, E. Fairground-st. The thrill of the youngster's life will come when he lands a job watering the elephants for a free seat by the ringside.

As an added feature of the circus, motion pictures will be taken of the crowds. The film will be shown [illegible] at the Grand Theater.

Sweeten the stomach—instantly

About two hours after eating many people suffer from sour stomachs. They call it indigestion. It means that the stomach nerves have been over-stimulated. There is excess acid. The way to correct it is with an alkali, which neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

The right way is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—just a teaspoon done in water. It is pleasant, efficient and harmless. It has remained the standard with physicians in the 50 years since its invention.

It is the quick method. Results come almost instantly. It is the approved method. You will never use another when you know.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. 25c and 50c a bottle—any drugstore.

"MARY" HELPS ERECT BIG CIRCUS

Just one word from Miss Gussie Miller and "Mary" the 80-year-old debutante with the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus does as told. "Mary" who has been trouping with the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus for many years is an exceptionally talented elephant, and the other members of the herd regard her as the leader.

When the Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus comes here Wednesday afternoon and night, "Mary" will show her version of the black bottom and also interpret the Argentine tango. Maybe she will do an old-fashioned waltz. However dancing is but one of the things that "Mary" does during the day. If you don't think she is a hard worker go out to the Drake show lot early Circus Day and observe how she assists in putting up the big show. One shove and a wagon moves ten feet, that is "Mary," whose strength is really unknown.

JAPAN REJECTS PLAN OF CHINESE WARLORD

Chang Tso-Lin Would Withdraw Troops If Foes Are Opposed

London, May 22—Chang Tso-Lin, the Northern Chinese war lord, has unofficially approached the Japanese government with a proposal in which he intimated he would withdraw his troops to Mukden, the capital of Manchuria, if the Japanese would hold back his Nationalist foes in the drive toward Peking, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Tokio stated today.

The Japanese government refused to accept Chang's proposal, the dispatch added. The Japanese, it is reported, fear that a disorganized retreat of the Northern armies in Manchuria might result in a repetition of the Tsinan incident.

There are many Japanese in Manchuria and Japan determined to see that none of its citizens are endangered. It is reported that all available Japanese troops in Manchuria are being concentrated at Mukden.

Self-interest is more likely to warp a man's judgment than anything else.

Get Set Kids, Start Your Tin Can Collection Now

Boys and girls, under 14 years of age, draw a deep breath and give three rousing cheers for The Star and Manager G. H. Foster of the Marion Theater.

Saturday each of you may be proud and happy that you are the possessor of six tin cans. They're what you'll need to get a place in the "Tin Can Parade" and to gain free admission to the show at the Marion, Saturday afternoon. The parade and show are planned as a wind-up for cleanup week here.

Manager Foster has not announced just what show he will give at the matinee but every kid in town knows what rousing good shows may be seen at the Marion any time. Announcement of this part of the program will be made in a later issue of The Star.

Start Your Collection

You'd better begin your tin can collection now, for by the time all the other boys and girls in Marion have found six tin cans the supply is going to be limited—and we don't mean maybe.

Any alley, vacant lot, back yard or similar place is likely to be a fruitful tin can hunting ground. We suggest that you tie the cans together so that they will be easier to carry.

Not only the boys and girls in Marion, but also the housewives will be keenly interested in this project of The Star and the Marion Theater. No one wants unsightly tin cans cluttering up an otherwise neat appearing yard, and as a part of the Cleanup Week campaign, it has been decided that this is about the easiest and most enjoyable way of getting rid of them.

Don't you think so?

Marion should be well on its way towards a perfect cleanup campaign when this movement is put over. Every little bit of rubbish removing helps lessen the fire hazard, and that is the kind of work that Fire Chief McFarland and his department is interested in and are willing to co-operate in.

SENTENCE TWO TO OHIO PEN

Alvin Worley and John Longacre Get 15 to 25 Years in Prison

Bucyrus, May 22—Sentenced to 15 to 25 years each in the Ohio State Penitentiary, Alvin Worley, 35, of New Philadelphia, and John Longacre, 36, alleged escaped convict from the state penal institution and also of New Philadelphia, were to be taken to the penitentiary at Columbus today in separate automobiles following death threats that they hurled at each other when they were sentenced yesterday.

The two men, it was brought out in their jury trial, tried to effect their escape from the County Jail here yesterday. A hole had been partially tunneled through the wall of the jail. It was discovered when Sheriff Ulmer was taking Worley to the courtroom. Worley accused Longacre of being the leader in the attempted jail delivery and Longacre accused Worley of the same thing.

Find Razors, Wire

Authorities found two razors, a heavy sash weight from one of the prison windows, a coil of heavy wire and a sharp piece of steel in the bathroom adjoining the men's cell.

The attempted jail break, it was said, was responsible for the heavy sentences imposed upon the men. Longacre admitted at the trial that he had served a term in the Ohio Penitentiary for robbery.

Worley and Longacre are alleged to have held up and robbed a restaurant at Crestline and then kidnaped a taxi driver, slugging him, and using his cab to make their escape. They were captured a short time after the robbery, however.

BUS FRANCHISE IS GRANTED BY COUNCIL

Ordinance for Motor Transportation Service Passed by Unanimous Vote

ers Co., provides for three routes, covering the city more completely than is now being done by the street cars. Work of Landscaping Begun at Old Harding Homestead

Work of landscaping the old Harding homestead, near Bloominggrove, owned by Dr. George T. Harding, Jr., of Worthington, has been begun by decorators of the Harmon Nursery at Prospect. An interesting effect is being worked out in the landscaping through the use of hollyhocks, lilacs, syringias, and other old fashioned flowers, carrying out the idea of an old style garden. Small trees and shrubbery to be found in the woods near the homestead are being transplanted to the yard to complete the decorative effect.

Dr. Harding has planned a number of other improvements about the place which will be carried out in a program to cover a period of several years. The homestead, which is on an improved road, attracts a large number of tourists and visitors throughout the year, and this, as well as a desire to preserve the property, has prompted Dr. Harding to make the improvements. He also plans to present the landscaping as an example of what can be done with native trees and shrubs by way of decorating and improving farm homes.

Bucyrus, May 22—A county-wide health achievement program will be held at the Sulphur Springs School auditorium Wednesday for the special benefit of the 500 farm women of Crawford County who during the last few months have been students of community "home care of the sick."

The health schools have been conducted by the extension department of Ohio State University in co-operation with the farm bureau. The schools were under the direction of Miss Wanda Prazinska, state extension health specialist.

Illustrations through demonstrations and original playlets will be given during the program by six of the seven communities in which schools were held.

Mandell Retains Title

SAMMY MANDELL.

M'Larnin Fails to Carry Single Round of Match

BY DAVID J. WALSH

Polo Grounds, New York, May 22—The harp that once threw Tara's hall played lullaby music to willing and unwilling chins had a slightly sour twang this morning.

Jimmy McLarnin still wore the harp on his back as he stepped out of the ring last night after 15 rounds with Sammy Mandell but that was only what he had planned to do, meanwhile taking a bow to left, right and center as the multitude blatted in unison. What he hadn't expected to wear was the "mouse" upon his tightly closed left eye or the vin rouge upon his upturned Irish nose, for this wasn't part of the act at all.

Neither was the fact that he saw occasion to take no bows as he went, in truth, he took nothing all evening, unless one wishes to include Mandell's inevitable left to the countenance and his occasional though authoritative right to the lobby or foyer.

As for taking the lightweight title away from Mandell, that prospect became an absurdity from the moment they exchanged their first grimace—for the benefit of the cloak and suit men, 20,000 in round numbers when they started. They were also round at the finish, only this time they were round shouldered with remorse. As a fight, it wasn't such a much.

It also would be achieving absurdity to state at this point, or any other, that Mandell still is the lightweight champion of the world. Everybody knew before the first round was over that, if McLarnin really was the outstanding challenger, Mandell would be champion until they started giving away cigar coupons to the two-nickels-for-a-dime telephone customers.

Of course, it is always popular and always safe to stand gallantly over the man who is down and kick him directly beneath the clavicle. I would like to avoid this onerous task but, after McLarnin's performance, I have no alternative but to deliver my kick with vindictive joy and go my way.

McLarnin probably couldn't have beaten Mandell with a horse whip last night but he didn't have to lose so far off that he failed to carry a single round of the 15. James was as game as the Irish in him demanded and he never stopped trying in the face of certain defeat. This was all very laudatory and commendable but it meant nothing. My objection is entered to the manner in which he tried.

Virtually 10 rounds behind at the end of the tenth—I called the fifth and sixth even—McLarnin was so poorly advised as to keep winging away to the body, his apparent intention being to wear his man down. This would have been ideal tactics if they were fighting 50 rounds, instead of 15. As it was, McLarnin's only chance then was to fling right and left hands at the profile and never stop. Of course, it is none of my business that he never started but I nevertheless reserve the right not to like the performance.

It might be pointed out that McLarnin couldn't reach Mandell's head and I will agree with this contention to the extent of saying that nobody can reach another man's head without trying.

However, the fact of the matter was that McLarnin apparently didn't know enough to beat Mandell the worst night the latter knew. And last night was one of his best. He slipped inside the right punch that leveled Terris and absorbed it innocuously with shoulder and elbow. He whipped his left hand into Jimmy's face without surface, absolutely the worst thing to be without. And, when he felt the urge, he crossed a right that had James' knees in a drooping condition in more than one of the late rounds.

That was the fight, as it happened to be fought. McLarnin tried but he never found the combination, which is not to his discredit. He tried to open it with the wrong key.

TAYLOR WINS

Shows Wilke City Fans That He's Not Through

Chicago, May 22—Rud Taylor, the Terre Haute bantamweight, demonstrated before 4,000 fans at White City last night that his dethronement as bantamweight champion by the National Boxing Association has not depressed him to the point where he can no longer fight.

Frisky as a young colt, the Indiana "Terrier" climbed into the ring with Joe Lucas of Detroit, and administered such a sound walloping on the Michigan boy as to make the match appear grossly one sided. Taylor had a wide margin in nine of the 10 rounds.

Lucas weighed 124 pounds against

Graber charges Risko with assault for an alleged beating administered to him April 24, last.

WINNING STREAK OF YANKEES IS STOPPED BY BOSTON RED SOX

Home Run Hitters Advance to Front with Circuit Clouts

New York, May 22—As the result of the defeat of the New York Yanks by the Boston Red Sox in the first game of a doubleheader yesterday, other American League clubs perked up a bit today. The Yanks had won 12 of their last 13 starts, including eight successive victories, and their rivals were beginning to fear that the winning streak of the champions was due to go on forever—just like Tennyson's brook and the Senate committee investigating campaign expenditures.

After being felled by the Boston Red Sox by an 8 to 4 count, the Yanks retaliated by nipping the Sox, 3 to 2, and snapping Boston's winning streak of seven straight. Meusel's home run, in the Charley Ruffing's four-hit game.

Home run hitters on all fronts found the range, delivering 13 circuit smashes. Hack Wilson and Sunny Bottomley have two apiece. Wilson now leads the National League home run race with six circuit clouts, one more than Lloyd Waner's total. Bottomley has six.

Harper and Roettger of the Cardinals also hit homers, enabling the Red Birds to nose out the Cubs, 8 to 7. The St. Louis club has hit 24 homers, a better record than any big league outfit except the Yankees, who have 28, and the Athletics, who have 25.

The Reds shaded the Pirates, 4 to 3, but lost a chance to go into first place when they dropped a 6 to 3 decision to the Bucks in the nightcap.

The Athletics advanced to within two games of the Yankees by taking close ones from Washington, 4 to 3, and 2 to 1. Jack Quinn won his own game in the opener with a hit in the thirteenth inning. This victory was costly for the Mackmen, however. Tris Speaker and Bing Miller collided in going after a fly and suffered injuries which will keep them out of the game for an indefinite period.

A homer by Dykes and Freney double gave the A's the nightcap win though they made only one hit off Hadley. The Nats dropped into second place.

Other clubs were not scheduled.

Industrial Stocks Swept Downward By Short Selling

FOUR-HOUR DAY BRINGS CAUTION

Wright and Curtiss Aero Drop 20 More Points on Market

Markets at a Glance

Industrial stocks irregular, railroad stocks irregular, domestic bonds easier, foreign bonds easier, call money six percent, grain steady, cotton irregular, oil steady, copper firm, rubber steady, sugar steady, pig iron firm, foreign exchange irregular.

BY W. S. COUSINS
International News Service
Financial Editor

New York, May 22—In the absence of special unfavorable developments in the finance and business world, industrial stocks were swept downward by a wave of profit taking and short selling which encountered very little "organized support," and in the course of which stop-loss orders were uncovered in the largest volume in a month or more.

It was a technical reaction, pure and simple, with professional Wall Street ready to take either side, and finding their advantage, for the moment at least, on the side of falling prices. The fiasco in the airplane stocks carried both Wright and Curtiss down 20 points more, to price levels about 70 points below the peak of last week, and a "thin market" even at these prices.

Wall Street's reaction to the four-hour day was decidedly mixed, but it was apparent that contraction of the working day has curtailed the activities of the professional sharpshooters, as well as developing an cautionary spirit in the ranks of outside traders. A large number of these traders had their eye out for profits today and were unwilling to make new commitments in the market at current prices.

In the first three hours no section of the market was able to withstand the heavy load of speculative selling which was poured in, without sizeable contractions in prices. General Motors was pounded down six points to 185, Radio lost as much, Steel common reacted two points, Studebaker and Chrysler two each, Standard Oils one to two points, investment rails one to four points. New York Central sold today at 178, a decline of 13 points from last week's high.

Banks made heavy demands on the call loan market, selling orders poured in from all directions and the mechanism of the market was again clogged up, with the tape trailing the market about half an hour in the fourth period. A better demand developed for the motor stocks at the low prices of the day, but fear of the continuance of high money rates and the hostile attitude of the Federal Reserve Bank heads, together with the persistent selling of the professionals, imposed an impassable barrier to a rally of any proportions in the speculative leaders.

Cotton

New York, May 22—Steadiness marked the opening of the cotton market here today. Opening quotations ranged from 1 point lower to 6 points higher. July sold at 20.85, up 03; October 20.84, unchanged; December 20.71, down 01; January 20.66, up 01; March 20.64, up 02 and May 21.13, up 06.

BANK CLEARINGS

Local bank clearings continue to show a decline. Clearings for yesterday were announced at the Marion County Bank today as $96,363.44, compared to $104,174.65 on the corresponding day last week.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

An advance of five cents a pound in leaf lettuce, bringing the price to 25 cents a pound, the peak price of the season, was the only change in the vegetable market being quoted by dealers here today. A continued shortage in the supply is given by dealers as the reason for the advance in price. Old potatoes were holding at 35 cents today. The supply is becoming less plentiful as the volume of new stock increases. New potatoes are selling at five pounds for 25 cents.

New cabbage is scarce. Dealers were carrying small supplies selling at 15 cents a pound, the peak price of the season. No prospects for an immediate drop in price being held out by dealers. Peas were not so plentiful today, the price still holding at 20 cents, while green beans were more plentiful and were finding a ready market at 25 cents a pound. An advance in the price of asparagus, which is now selling at 15 cents a bunch, or two bunches for 25 cents, is being predicted by dealers.

An advance from 30 to 35 cents in the larger size pineapples was being quoted by dealers. Smaller sizes are holding at 20 cents. Strawberries were plentiful today and were selling at 25 and 30 cents. Berries of fairly good quality could be bought for 25 cents.

Retail meat prices were steady, with dealers reporting a falling off in buying, due to the coming of warmer weather. Pork products are holding at the low prices which have prevailed for the past several months.

TODAY'S REVIEW OF YESTERDAY'S MARKET

Chicago, May 22—Except May oats and May rye the grain futures closed lower yesterday. Late in the session corn broke rapidly from the bulge it had achieved earlier, and at the end that grain looked weak.

Wheat was off 8@11¼c at the finish; corn was down 1½@1¾c; oats were ½c higher to ½c lower, rye was changed to 1⅜c lower.

Wheat showed momentary firmness at the opening, but there was no persistent buying in the market. During most of the day it was sluggish, with a tendency to drag lower.

Reports came in that prospects had improved in northwestern Kansas and in parts of Nebraska. Men who were extremely bullish a couple of weeks ago were shaking out old opinions and making up their minds afresh on the situation.

Think Wheat Improves

There are those in the trade who now prophesy that the Winter wheat crop will show a prospect of as much as 500,000,000 bushels in the next government report.

But the most important influence on the wheat market from now on undoubtedly will be the situation in our Northwest and in Canada. Big Spring wheat crops in those areas will be likely to depress prices.

May wheat at a discount under the deferred futures makes the whole market look less inviting to buyers. There was a decrease of more than 3,000,000 bushels in the visible supply.

An eager effort seemed to be being made to bull corn. That market was erratic. The July future sold up to 1.09½, but late in the session it began to slip, and in the last fifteen minutes its strength faded away rapidly.

At the close corn looked weak, although it may be several days yet before it takes a decided trend. The visible supply showed a decrease of just about 3,000,000 bushels.

Corn Market Dangerous

Many good judges are extremely bullish on corn, but the market looks to me still to be in a dangerous position. Such blowouts as that of yesterday, when the market bore in a few minutes all the gain and more that it has taken hours to acquire, do not make corn look like a good purchase to the right here.

Absolutely know when clients thousands of dollars investing our discretion stocks.

MRS. FLETCHER ON SPECIAL RADIO BILL

Wife of Marion Congressman In Program To Be Broadcast May 23

Mrs. Brooks Fletcher, wife of Congressman Fletcher of Marion, will take the leading part in a radio program to be broadcast Wednesday night, May 23, it was announced today. The program, to be broadcast over station WTFF, has been especially arranged by the Washington College of Music. Mrs. Fletcher's assisting artist will be Burrows Williams, pianist.

The time announced for the program to begin is 10 P. M., Washington time. Because of the Capitol having its full quota of radio stations, Mrs. Fletcher's program will be announced WTFF from the Hills of Mt. Vernon, the home of Washington. The WTFF wave length is 201.

Mrs. Fletcher's acceptance of the invitation to broadcast in a special program featuring her as the headliner of the evening is in response to the numerous requests that have come from those in Ohio and different parts of the country who heard her when she broadcast recently with United States Senator Borah.

Mrs. Fletcher has appeared in concert programs in many different cities. In a single season she has appeared before as many as 70 audiences.

In Massachusetts and throughout New England she has given 60 concerts and appeared before audiences in 12 of the leading cities of the Dominion of Canda.

In recognition of her platform experience and ability as a musical artist Mrs. Fletcher has been extended an invitation by one of the leading musical colleges of the country to accept a position as a member of the faculty, the report from Washington states.

Because of her interest in politics and public affairs Mrs. Fletcher works with her husband, Congressman Fletcher of the Eighth Ohio District, is closely associated with him in all his political activities and she is able to accept but a small number of the many invitations to appear in concert specials.

"Jumping Frog of San Joaquin" Crowned Champion Leaper of World at Jubilee

Angels Camp, Cal., May 21—A proud amphibian in the "jumping frog of San Joaquin" today.

A few short hours ago, he was but an obscure croaking creature in a muddy world. Then suddenly the mantle of fame descended upon his green shoulders. And today in the most exclusive as well as the commonest social and athletic circles of the frog domain, he is being hailed as the world's champion.

The "jumping frog of San Joaquin" literally leaped into renown. Entered in the derby, the main event of Angels' Camp's picturesque jumping frog jubilee, the sturdy little performer hurtled through the air for a record-breaking distance of three feet, six inches, to emerge victorious over a field of 51 competitors.

On the eve of the contest, the "jumping frog of San Joaquin" was considered nothing more than a "dark frog" with little chance to win by most of the 15,000 spectators who lined the main street of this "ghost city" of California's historic gold rush. The leaping marathon, a re-enactment of Mark Twain's "jumping frog of Calaveras County," came as the climax of a two-day festival which revived, in costume and atmosphere, the vivid days of '49, when Angels Camp was a "mushroom" city, fermenting with the bustling life of the goldseekers.

Suggestions to Purchasers and Users of Refrigerators

In buying a refrigerator keep the following points in view, everyone of which is a prominent feature in the "Challenge Line."

The preservation of perishable food is the first and most vital point.

To obtain this end requires a low temperature and absolutely "dry air." Both of these can only be obtained by a perfect system of circulation of air in the refrigerator. Low temperature alone without air circulation will not produce these results.

How can this be brought about without extreme cost? Economy is still one of the requirements of all well regulated families. Extravagance still leads to poverty. A good refrigerator does not necessarily mean an extravagant price. With proper care a good refrigerator will last a lifetime. More and more attention is being paid to the COST of the refrigerator by the economical housewife.

Challenge refrigerators have been built for over forty years and they know how. No fancy fads and frills—no points that are only "Talking Points," but honest to goodness merchandise that has stood the test of time and given satisfactory service to millions of families and is doing so today. Ours is not a "Stock Jobbing Institution."

They build refrigerators with All Porcelain Outside, also Wood Outside.

They build ALL of their lines with an inner wall of wood which adds strength and insulation qualities.

They line the inside with Porcelain on 18-gauge Armco Iron and Enamel on Galvanized Steel.

The drain tube and trap are on the inside of the refrigerator and are easily removable for cleaning.

To start with, the materials used are so selected and compounded that they will not make the mouth sore.—Then a superior grade of teeth are selected, carved from models of live teeth.—in fact perfect reproductions of live teeth.—then by my method of taking impressions, and many other refinements, including my own original method of setting up and finishing,—a super plate is produced.—"A Plate that Fits Right,—Bites Right,—and Looks Right."—The gums are natural pink like live gums. The teeth are especially selected as to mold, shade and color for each case.

...ANTS DRY AGENTS PUT IN UNIFORMS

...s. Florence Kahn, C. O. P. Congressman, Would Prevent Tragedies

...ington, May 22—A member of ...House "feminine bloc" — Mrs. ...ence Kahn, Republican congress... from California—today de... favor of placing prohibition ...cement agents in uniform. ...The average, law-abiding person should have an even chance to escape being shot down by a prohibition agent who calls halt on a country road at night and then runs away," said Mrs. Kahn.

"The recent shooting of Jacob Handon, an official of the Elks Lodge, near Niagara Falls, N. Y., shows that every one who drives the country roads at night is in danger.

"Congress itself contributed a victim to this promiscuous shooting of dry agents when Senator Greene of Vermont was seriously wounded in Washington.

"The natural tendency of a motorist who is told to halt at night is to 'step on the gas.' If the prohibition agents were in uniform and displayed it, there would be fewer tragic results of the attempted enforcement of the law."

King's Daughters Start Drive Here to Help Blind Man and Members of Family

WILL RAISE FUND TO PURCHASE RESIDENCE

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bill in Danger of Losing Home

IF you have been a resident of Marion for any length of time it is easy for you to recognize one and perhaps two of the people in the picture for they are familiar figures on the streets of the city and in the residence district where the man sells his handiwork, with the aid of the son, who in this case is also his eyes.

If you have been in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bill recently you are well aware of the fact that there is something worrying Mr. and Mrs. Bill, both of whom are blind, and even Harold and little Rose Alice seem to sense there is something amiss. The only one who isn't the least bit concerned about matters is little Marilouise, whose merry blue eyes dance as she bids you good bye in her own language. And it's just this problem that members of Marion's King's Daughters Circles, who have long been interested in the Bill family, are going to try to solve with the help of Marion's citizens.

The King's Daughters hope to aid Mr. and Mrs. Bill in saving their home, which they must lose, unless some financial aid is given, and they are asking the help of Marion citizens in doing it. It isn't charity they are asking, but rather just a little boost over a rough spot in the road, for once this burden of paying for the home is lifted, everyone concerned feels that other matters will adjust themselves.

When Mr. and Mrs. Bill came to Marion a little more than six years ago it was their ambition to own their home and rear their little family with all the advantages which they could give them. Not only this, but it seemed to the father and mother that owning their own home would solve the biggest problem towards providing for their family. Their purchase was the modest five room dwelling on Lee-st, which they now occupy and which a few weeks ago they felt they would have to give up. Not but what the man from whom they purchased the house had been patient and most lenient, but because Mr. Bill felt that there was not possible way to meet the payments and hesitated asking the original owner of the property to extend the time of payments any longer.

The owner of the house, Stewart Glascner, who has generously kept up the payment of taxes for five years, has made a liberal discount on the price of the property and it is the aim of the King's Daughters to sponsor the raising of a fund to pay off the debt on the house, which is $1,000. They are asking for contributions in any amount from the smallest to the largest that any one feels moved to give. Mrs. Walter E. Miley, chairman of the city union, has announced that contributions will be received by any King's Daughter, or may be left or sent to the Marion County Bank. Checks, she stated, should be made payable to the King's Daughters Home Fund.

Broom Business Slow

A glimpse into the home life of the Bill family, will easily convince one that their's is no ordinary case. While their gratitude is boundless in this instance as well as in many others where the family has been aided by the King's Daughters and other organizations and individuals, it is somewhat of a disappointment to Mr. Bill, for it was his hope that through his own endeavor and management, he would be able to earn his own home. Reverses came when business fell off in the sale of brooms, which Mr. Bill made in the little shop at the rear of his lot, and for which he took orders and delivered. Along with the work of making brooms Mr. Bill tries his hand at selling articles in a house to house canvass and in this Mrs. Bill adds her bit, too, by taking orders for household necessities, and little Harold puts his shoulder to the wheel by assisting in delivering the orders before and after school and during vacation time. They depend also for a part of their maintenance on the blind pension, and receive the sum of $50 every three months. Theirs, however, is the only case in the county where two persons are blind in the one family. An effort is being made, it is understood, to have the pension for the blind raised in this county, and this brings a ray of hope into the hearts of Mr. and Mrs. Bill.

"We feel our handicap most in trying to make a living," Mr. Bill said, in discussing his situation. "There are so few things we can do, and the trouble is there are 99 of us trying to make a living at the same business in the same territory, where one could well do the work. If we only could make money like other people, we wouldn't mind our blindness so much."

Mrs. Bill Busy

A visit to the Bill home is proof enough that Mrs. Bill doesn't spend her time bemoaning her fate or chatting over the events of the neighborhood. The spotless and tidy rooms and the care of their meager, but comfortable furnishings is a silent testimony as to how she spends her hours which in view of her handicap, really means hours of hard and tedious work. The surroundings of the home are proof of somebody's time spent in work outside and the garden patch at the rear of the home, with the exception of a little plot, which is kept by Harold Bill, is let out on the shares to a neighbor.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Bill attended the School for the Blind and have good educations which enable them to enjoy life and living in no small measure. Mrs. Bill was a student in the domestic science class and is exceptionally skilled in the art of weaving, which she loves. Members of the family are affiliated with the Central Christian Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill have three children living, Harold Denny, who will be 12 years old Aug. 31, and who is a student at the Silver Street School, Rose Alice, who was six years of age April 27, and Marilouise, who will be one year old, July 8. Three years ago last June they lost a little boy, whose death occurred at Marion City Hospital.

Start Campaign

The Bill family life is much like the ordinary home life of most families, except that for the normal sense of the day and entertainment they must depend on their blindness senses. While family comforts is plenty, they are confined there practically every day and a possible change of home, they depend for a large share of it upon their neighbors and the people whom they have befriended by their deeds of kindness. The King's Daughters Circles have taken up the matter of raising the money and are starting their campaign this week and are asking everyone's help in raising the sum of $1,000 to pay for a home for this family. Leaders of the circles sponsoring the movement are Mrs. Harry Gurley, Mrs. Walter Bailey, Mrs. H. J. Lower, Mrs. French Crow, Mrs. Edward Meredith, Miss Cleo Finley, Miss Jane Smith and Miss Catherine Shoemaker.

O. S. U. President Breaks Silence on Hazing Parties

Marion Star Bureau
Ohio State University

Columbus, May 22—President George W. Rightmire, of Ohio State University has put a heavily-booted foot down upon any form of student hazing, whether it be of the traditional freshman variety or the informal farewell parties for the graduating seniors.

A complete reversal of the conditions in regard to student hazing had just begun to take form at the university last week and duckings in Mirror Lake were becoming daily occurrences when President Rightmire, after remaining silent on the question for more than a year, again came forward and threatened expulsion from the university to violators of the rule in the future.

Freshmen for whom the rule was instituted last year, however, were not victims of the mournful upper-classmen in the most recent attempt at the revival of the tradition. In fact, the first-year members of the university were components of conspiracies to toss unwilling members of the senior class into the mucky waters of the campus lake.

"Wet" Farewells Banned

Following the lead of one of the campus fraternities, with which the custom of giving graduating members of its own group a "wet" farewell, other organizations threatened to establish the term of "Senior Hell Week" on the campus by the interest taken in the spring activity, before the arrival of the Buckeye prezy on the scene.

The president's action however, is believed to have made the situation much more complicated for the seniors. While the new rule states that no duckings are permitted in the lake, it does not designate that similar tossings are prohibited in the roily waters of the Olentangy River which courses through the westen side of the campus. Clad only in under-garments, the victims are made to walk back to the fraternity houses following the ducking. The change of the scene for the baptism adds nearly a mile to the jaunt home.

LIGHTED SIGNPOSTS READY FOR FLIERS

Built in Shape of Dots and Dashes of Morse Code

Paris, May 22—Illuminated signposts for "aerial streets" are now in operation throughout France for night fliers. They are electrically-lighted glass tubes built in the shape of dots and dashes, arranged in the Morse code spelling of the names of towns along the four commercial airplane routes—Paris-London; Paris-Brussels; Paris-Marseilles and Toulouse-Perpignan.

The Morse telegraphic code was employed to save space and insure visibility, as many of the towns have long names and must be further identified by adding the name of the province in which they are located.

Although installed primarily to guide passenger and mail traffic, the signs will be lighted up for any flyer on 24 hours notice. The use of the signs requires a night flying airman to learn the Morse code.

Aviators are being trained also in night flying by a Parisian school which utilizes a set of indicators perfected by Henry Farman. With these instruments, it is said, a plane can be kept on it course despite fog and darkness.

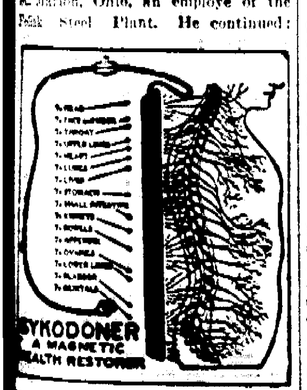
It Just Simply Made a New Man of Him

Not An Ache or Pain Left—Had Been a Very Sick Man — Sykodoner Is Surely a Winner.

"That new, simple Sykodoner, you ... so much about all over Marion, ... made a new man of me," ... Mr. Clarence Wright, 553 Davids ... Marion, Ohio, an employe of the ... Steel Plant. He continued:



"After being down with a severe case of the grippe, I suffered terribly with pain in my side, weak, and unable to work at all. I was a very sick man, indeed, when I first called at the office of the Sykodoner Man, who assured me, that the Sykodoner, no doubt, was just what I needed to get straightened out. He surely knew his "onions," for I began to mend immediately. I soon went back to work again, doing real work, handling heavy steel rails. I do not have an ache or pain left, thanks to the glorious Sykodoner. It simply made a new man out of me. I never would have believed that such a simple, delightful treatment could do so much for one in such a short time. I cannot say enough for it. My foreman, too, apparently received glorious results, from the same work. I consider it most foolish for anyone suffering with any pain or affliction, to waste further time in delay when such a wonderful work is now available to them."

Demonstration Free.

Be sure to see the Sykodoner Man, today, in his new, beautiful office parlors, 543 N. Greenwood St., Marion, Ohio; and see the most amazing phenomena of all your life. No, you will not be able to explain it, at all. Yet it is in Marion now, where you may see it without cost or obligation. Phone 760 for appointment in office, or in the comforts of your own home. In fact, it is the most delightful treatment known—can be taken without even removing a garment—seated in your easy chair—or while sound asleep. Have you ever heard or seen anything like it? No, you have not. Well, you have a chance now. Will you accept it?

Do a kind act, by reading this to an afflicted friend.

BABE SLAIN WHEN PARENTS QUARREL

Father Slashes Woman's and His Own Throats During Quarrel

Dayton, May 22—An eight-months-old child is dead, and its parents are in a hospital with slashed throats in a critical condition as the result of a quarrel over domestic relations here today.

The girl, according to police, was slashed from ear to ear by its father, Edward Linton, 37, of Avon, Lorain County, when Clara Balmert, 35, the child's mother, refused to return to him. Another child, Florence, aged two and a half years was not attacked.

According to authorities, Mrs. Balmert's husband is serving a term in the Ohio State Penitentiary at Columbus for highway robbery. The man was said to have been sentenced two years ago in Cleveland.

The woman, it is said, became friendly with Linton, while her husband was serving his sentence in the penitentiary.

Guard Over Man

A guard is being kept over Linton in the hospital, police asserted. If he recovers he will be formally charged with murder, they said.

Linton's weapon, a long knife, which police were unable to locate immediately after the tragedy was found in a suitcase in the kitchen of the woman's apartment, situated in the shadow of police headquarters.

That Linton's act was premeditated was the conclusion drawn by police after they found a note in the man's coat pocket to his mother at Avon, which read: "If you hear anything bad, please forgive me. I am sending my belongings to you."

Mrs. Balmert, who was hardly able to talk as she lay on her bed in the hospital, told police that she had repulsed Linton when she became the mother of his child. She further told him, she declared, that her affairs were in the hands of a police-woman and that they must part.

Linton then is believed to have become enraged and the tragedy followed.

IS SENTENCED

Youth Given Term Following Death of Accident Victim

Toledo, May 22—Abe Shapiro, Toledo youth, was today to begin serving an indeterminate term in the Ohio Reformatory at Mansfield, to which he was sentenced yesterday by Judge Fred Hay, of Defiance. The sentence was the result of the death of 75-year-old Bernard Schmidt who was killed by an automobile alleged to have been driven by Shapiro on March 10. Shapiro had been indicted for manslaughter but had pleaded not guilty. Yesterday, however, he admitted his guilt.

In pronouncing sentence, the court pointed out that the child, with his mother were proceeding on the sidewalk, that the child was lost to the mother, that "human life cannot be restored," and that a prison sentence would "have its effect on other reckless drivers."

He died of the disease he had spent his life battling against—the yellow plague. His death took place while he was conducting experiments to obtain new methods of fighting the source. MINE TOWN BURIES BLAST DEAD TODAY

Services Are Held in Village Square with Catholic and Protestant Rites

Krubick deep in the room, seated on a rail. Gas was seeping into the room, and he would have been overcome soon.

"You no come pretty soon," he greeted them, "somebody choke you."

The gas apparently had been sweeping down the entryway, and C. M. Lengel, directing the rescue work, said that he feared the 136 others known to be in the mine already have been overcome.

Krubick walked to the entry-way without assistance, was placed on a stretcher and brought to the surface. Here an attendant touched his lips with coffee.

"Give me all that coffee," Krubick shouted.

"I no have anything to eat for three days."

Taken to His Home

Krubick and 210 others were entombed about 5 p. m. Saturday. The rescued man was taken to his home near the mine, where physicians took him under their care and barred the doors.

News of Krubick's rescue spread like wildfire through the little mining village, and hope, which had flickered and died late last night when fire was reported sweeping the workings, was revived as hundreds of men, women and children crowded the hillsides leading down to the mine tipple.

Lengel's statement that he feared the 134 others were dead failed to dim their optimism.

Children ran screaming down the roads, and from every miner's hut poured hurrying figures.

Hope has come back to Mather!

In Good Spirits

Bruce Deal, the first of the rescue crew to reach Krubick, said the miner leaped to his feet and threw his arms around Deal.

Despite his threats to "choke somebody," the miner, who is about 55 and unmarried, was in good spirits.

Once he was above ground, Krubick joked with his rescuers.

Krubick said that a companion, with whom he had been trapped in the room, wandered away and disappeared down the entryway. Rescue teams said the man probably was overcome by gas.

Fire which gained headway last night was brought under control in the mine today, and the danger of a second explosion passed. Crews pressed forward, in the hope that others may have found pockets of air sufficient to sustain them since Saturday.

Thompson filed a list of contributors, Benan G. Dawes, brother of the vice president, gave $7,500 while Thompson gave $6,800. J. W. Hopkins and T. W. Robinson of Chicago each gave $5,000. So did Michael Gallagher of Cleveland. L. M. Willis, a brother of the senator, gave $1,000.

Reveals Contributions

Thompson revealed he made some personal contributions to county committees. In all, he said he gave "about $10,000."

Thompson explained that he accepted these "large contributions" only because "contributions fell off after Senator Willis' death."

"We have called you because you are known as a candidate for the presidency," said Senator Steiwer, Republican of Oregon.

"You compliment me," said Pomerene, who denied he was an active candidate for president.

"I at no time announced my candidacy," Pomerene added. "Some of my friends canvassed the states and later on the State Democratic Central Committee passed a resolution, requesting me to permit the use of my name. I was slow to consent but I finally did, with the understanding there would be no contest."

$2,077 for Smith

Chesley W. Jurney of Texas, secretary to Senator Copeland, Democrat of New York, testified he spent $2,077.15 in behalf of Gov. Al Smith. He spent $1,280 during a 10 weeks' visit to Texas last fall. He also had printed and distributed literature favorable to Smith.

Jurney said Copeland contributed $500 to his expenses while the rest came from his own pocket.

The Mather Horror.

As the days pass, the horror of the explosion of last Saturday in the Mather Collieries mine at Mather, Pennsylvania, grows. It was known from the first that the toll would be heavy, but hope was entertained that others in addition to the fourteen taken out alive would be rescued. Today that hope is about abandoned, and the probability is strong that about 200 lives have been wiped out in the disaster, which would cause it to rank as the seventh in the list of mine horrors.

Sixty bodies have been taken out, leaving 138 workmen, dead or alive, entombed. Even though those still within the mine be yet alive, it is felt that they will perish before they can be reached, for the force of the explosion, the cause of which is as yet a mystery, was such as to shatter the roof and cause it to fall in many places, and it will take many days of incessant work to clear the debris away.

It is said that every precautionary measure to avert such a disaster as has befallen the Mather mine had been taken; that every safeguard had been utilized, but this is somewhat hard to credit, for certainly there must be some possible means other than those employed to keep coal mines clear of accumulations of gas such as wrecked this mine. There must be some system of ventilation that will draw away the gases which are a constant menace to human life.

If there is no such system, if no such method has as yet been devised, it should be the one great work of all those interested in the coal mining industry to perfect something of the kind, and once perfected, its installation in every mine should be made obligatory, for workmen should not be asked—they should not be permitted—to go down into mines where there is chance of a horror like this at Mather, when means of safeguarding them may be applied. The cost should not be permitted to stand in the way of the safeguarding of human lives, when such safeguarding is possible.

No Congressional Reapportionment.

The deferring of action looking to congressional reapportionment during the present session of congress is ascribed to many causes, chief among them being the disinclination of the representatives of some states to see their state delegations reduced, rural jealousy of populous centers, the fear of the Southern states that the opening of the subject would lead to the loss by them of the unfair representation which is now theirs, and practical machine politics. Wet interests are also inclined to hold the Anti-Saloon league in part responsible, charging that it entered the fight against reapportionment at this time because of its realization that any redistricting which would give the big population centers more representation in national and state legislatures would seriously threaten prohibition, as such centers are very generally wet.

The Fenn bill, on which the matter came up for vote and against which 186 votes were mustered, proposed that the present membership of the house be left unchanged at 435, but that twenty-three seats be changed, taken from some states and given to others on the basis of the decennial census which will be taken two years hence.

Under the provisions of the bill, California would gain six representatives; Michigan, four; Ohio, three; New Jersey and Texas, two each, and Arizona, Connecticut, Florida, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Washington, one each. Under the proposal, Missouri would lose three congressmen; Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky and Mississipi, two each, and Alabama, Kansas, Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Nebraska, New York, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Vermont and Virginia, one each.

The fight against the measure was led by Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, and the strength of his support came from the South, southern Illinois and the Tammany delegation from New York. It was held out that the bill, if enacted into law, would make the census bureau the arbitrer of house apportionment hereafter. This argument was voiced by a number of southern representatives, but the real explanation is held to be that the South feared that any change would result in the disturbing of the present southern practice of counting the negroes for the purpose of representation and at the same time not permitting them to exercise the right of franchise.

However, no matter what the explanation, the bill was recommitted by a vote of 186 to 165, despite the fact that congressional reapportionment, long overdue, has been sidestepped year after year in violation of the basic law of the land; a matter which has drawn fire from representative newspapers of the land, without regard to their political leanings.

No matter what explanation may be attempted in excuse for the dalliance which has prevailed in the matter of reapportionment, the fact remains that there has been an utter ignoring of the provision of the constitution which fixes the size of the delegations of the various states in the lower house of congress, and a sorry example is set when those whose duty it is to make the laws persistently ignore the basic law of the land.

MAROONED.

Using Common Sense.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Anemia, kidney disturbances, diabetes and a general run down condition are rarely uncomplicated ailments. What we call "secondary diseases" may result. One such thing is known as boils.

These disagreeable visitors may come in "crops," or they may come singly. But no matter how they come they are equally painful. They may attack any part of the body. As a rule, however, they are found most commonly on the neck, face, arms, buttocks and legs. One of the most painful of the small boils is in the ear or the nose.

Germs are such common things and so readily find entrance to the body that you will not be surprised when I tell you that a germ is the cause of boils. Usually persons with lowered vitality and poor general health are the ones most susceptible to boils. This is because their resistance is lowered and there is no vitality to fight and destroy the watchful germs.

The difference between a boil and the ordinary abscess or infection, is that the boil always has a "core" or hard center. That is characteristic of the typical boil.

Suppose you have a boil—what do you do about it? Many persons make the grave mistake of squeezing the boil all the time. This is the wrong thing to do. Every time you squeeze a boil you break down the surrounding tissues, allowing the infection to spread.

I do not mean that boils should not be opened to allow the pus to come out. I do mean, however, that continued opening and squeezing is harmful.

It is always wise to consult your doctor if you have a boil. He may be able to prevent your having several more boils.

There are vaccines for many forms of disease. One that has done good is the autogenous vaccine made from the pus of the infection.

If you are a victim of boils there is much you can do for yourself. Make sure you are not constipated—keep the bowels open. Avoid excessive use of fats, rich pies and pastries and condiments. Drink plenty of water and lemonade.

If more than one boil occurs or, for that matter, if you have a single one, you must make sure there is no underlying condition. Have the urine examined to make sure you have no kidney complications.

In short, take an inventory of your health. Wherever you find something missing which good health requires, set about correcting the defect. That is good advice always and it is particularly true of this simple ailment.

Some time I will say more about boils, but in the compass of this short article are a number of suggestions which I hope may prove helpful. The skin is a sort of mirror of the vital organs. If it is not clean and clear, something is wrong somewhere. Do not disregard these outward and visible signs of an internal disturbance.

Nobody should be too much bound by advice, but he at least should give himself the benefit of hearing counsel, turning it over in his mind and taking it for what it is worth.

An able and studious lawyer, speaking of books, writes this letter:

"First I would take the Bible. And give me the King James version, the one that says: 'And now abideth faith, hope and charity, but the greatest of these is charity.' I don't want the one that says: 'And now abideth faith, hope and love.' Some people would change anything, even the classics of the Bible. We learned to love the phrase 'In my Father's house are many mansions.' The new way of saying it is 'Ther are many rooms.' It is only a step in the Greek from father to grandfather, and the first thing we know some modernist will be insisting that passage should read 'In my grandfather's apartment are many places to sleep.'

"Next I would take Will Durant's 'The Story of Philosophy.' Next I would take Shakespeare.

"Inasmuch as you limit us to ten books and ten books only, I suppose my next three will have to be Warren's 'The Supreme Court in United States History.' If I could count that three-volume work in as one book, I would also like to take Beveridge's 'Life of John Marshall.' But that would add four more volumes, and I am limited to only ten in all.

"This makes me six. Next I would take Emerson's Essays.

"Next I would want Bacon's Essays.

"Next I would want to take Pope with me.

"And to balance off them all, we would throw in a volume of Tennyson."

Where Beauty Blushes Unseen.

BY TEMPLE MANNING.

As is true of most Mohammedan women, those who live in Algiers are forced to lead sequestered lives. Although no expense is spared for their clothing, although they are clad in silken robes, hung with silver and gold necklaces, their hands loaded with rings and their arms and ankles with bracelets, they have little opportunity to show their finery to the world. However, there is one place where the women congregate where, of course, no man is permitted, and that is the public baths. There the women, exquisitely robed, spend their afternoons. It is their club.

These baths are often beautiful places. The doors and beams are of carved marble, the interior of the buildings are walled and floored with flower-designed tiles.

The inscriptions on the doorways, in French and Arabic, proclaim that the baths are open in the morning for men only; in the afternoon, for women. And the women live for the few hours of freedom, when they can gather in the baths and gossip.

There is, I must add, one other time in the week when the women may be seen in public, and that is on Fridays, when they may visit the Mohammedan cemeteries. The rest of the time they are confined at home.—Copyright, 1928, Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

The Scarab.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

"Will you tell me how the scarab beetle was used by the early Egyptians? — A. E. R., Chicago."

It is a story of superstition, which means the striving of the human spirit after things that it does not, and perhaps can not, know. In the eagerness of this striving the mind is not critical of means and methods.

Superstition seizes on the smallest resemblance or the most fortuitous coincidence, believing it to be an opening into the realm of the mysterious, leading behind the curtain of the future. Superstition attaches itself to religion and also to science. Indirectly, superstition has sometimes opened the way for science.

The scarab beetle, species of which are found all over the world, familiar examples being the big, awkward, blundering, humming "June-bug" and the "tumble-bug," was worshiped by the Egyptions as an "emblem of fertility and the resurrection." How this connection arose may be seen by considering the curious ways of our "tumble-bug," or "dung beetle," which is a close relative of the Egyptian scarabaeus sacer. The beetle lays its egg in a ball of dung, which it makes very carefully, and of surprising roundness, rolling the ball about by pushing with its hind legs, thus trundling it to considerable distances, and finally burying it. The interior of the ball is stuffed with food, upon which the young beetle feeds before its emergence at the end of its period of prenatal burial.

The conduct of the scarab with its ball is interesting. Old naturalists were puzzled to understand how the insect could make the ball so nearly spherical. A recent writer says that the beetle may be seen "on sandy slopes in hot sunshine, compacting the pellet by pushing it backward uphill with its hind legs and allowing it to roll down again."

As this is done while the ball is still fresh and undried, it is manifestly a very practical method of "rounding," like that used by the housewives of old, but not forgotten, times when they rolled the dough to make "fried cakes" in the form of baseballs. It is also akin to the science of the schoolboy with snowballs.

The Egyptians related the cradle-ball of the scarab beetle to the globe of the sun, which had at least this gleam of drawing science about it, that it assumed that the sun was of a spherical shape. According to some writers the ball was also likened by the Egyptians to the earth—a still more striking guess at scientific fact. They likewise made it symbolical of a courageous warrior, for the curious reason that they thought young scarabs were "born of a male." This may have arisen from the fact that the male beetles at least assist in rolling the balls. Professor Comstock has said that "this is one of the instances, rare among insects, where the male realizes that he has some responsibility as a father."

The "complex" of superstition was very strong with the ancient Egyptians, and their scarab, used as an amulet, set in a ring, or a seal, or other personal ornament, was a good offset to the horoscope of the Chaldeans. Many of the Egyptian carved or engraved scarabs were very beautiful, and they were widely scattered by commerce over the Mediterranean world, the Phoenicians being the great distributors. But later they were made in variant forms by the Etruscans, the Greeks and other nations. It is well worth your while to study them in any large museum. They can be bought today not only in the East but in any great capital, but it is well to remember that the scarab has for long presented an irresistible temptation to forgers of antiquities. But if you are looking merely for an amulet, a forged scarab would be just as effective as a genuine product of the days when Heliopolis was in all his glory.—Copyright, 1927, International Feature Service, Inc.

Editorial Opinion.

FARMERS

Among the figures on the growth of wealth in the United State compiled by Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., not the least interesting is a single item relating to the farmer. It serves both to vindicate him and to raise doubts about McNary-Haugen. Since 1880 the value of manufactures in the United States has risen from $9,372,000,000 to $62,700,000,000. In the same period the value of farm products has gone up from $2,460,000,000 to $19,700,000,000. Thus while the output of our factories has been multiplied by 6.7 the value of the farmer's products has increased eightfold.

This showing is all the more impressive in view of the notable decline in the number of workers on the farm. In 1890 the rural population was 64.6 per cent. of the total population. In 1920 it was 48.6 per cent. Not only has the value of farm products been multiplied by eight since 1890, but the resultant income has to be distributed among only two-thirds as many farmers as in 1890. This same increase in output accompanied by a decline in man-power would dispose of the familiar plaints about the farmer's lax and inefficient methods. If only he practiced account-keeping and went in for labor-saving devices, the farmer would have no reason to run to Washington for relief. To this the farmer is now apparently in a position to reply that he has been quite as efficient in running his business as the manufacturers who are at pains to advise him. And he would point to the facts cited above. He produces a greater money value, compared with 1890, with reduced manpower, than the manufacturers can show with their great increase in labor and their extraordinary development of machinery and production methods.

That the farmer, or at least his relief advocates, will hasten to make such a retort is doubtful. Their ass consists in stressing the farmer's unhappy condition and in the general hypothesis that agriculture is going to the dogs. Rather may we expect that the Stone & Webster figures will be challenged. It is arguable that the estimate of nearly $20,000,000,000 as the value of farm products does not represent the amount the farmer receives for his crops. The spread between prices on the farm and in the retail grocery and butcher store is precisely one of the chief items in the farmer's complaint. He may question the absolute figures in themselves. Where did the statisticians get their $19,700,000,000? The census bureau's estimate of the annual value of farm products for 1925 and 1926 was $13,000,000,000. The highest year was 1919, when farm products were estimated at $17,677,000,000. It is this high peak the farmer has in mind today when he speaks bitterly of "deflation." Yet we must assume that the experts who compiled the Stone & Webster figures know their business and will stand considerable answering.—New York Times.

BOOTLEGGING IN BRITAIN.

The news that bootlegging is a thriving industry in Great Britain is brought by the Associated Press. The bootleggers evade the high taxes on whisky and brandy. White whisky, new and potent, is the popular bootleg drink. More than 500 illicit whisky and beer plants have been destroyed or confiscated in England and Scotland. Quarrels among bootleggers lead to gang fights and tipping off information of law violation to the police.

The same news might come from almost any American city.

High tax gives the bootleg business impetus elsewhere. Prohibition is held accountable for it in the United States. In either case profit is the purpose. Bootlegging will continue until it is made profitless by free and unrestricted legal sale of intoxicating liquors, and that has no advocates who dare come out in the open.—Toledo Blade.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

New York, May 22.—Broadway seems to me to be mellowest when lights come on. Dusk brings a softening influence. Broadway is at "after dark" street with everybody looking forward to anticipatory joys of the night. The attitude is expectant, like hunters awaiting the horn.

From the side street rooming-houses and shady hotels at nightfall come the doubtful and provocative maidens, glamorously bright with cosmetic artifices. The cheaper cafes fill with early-diner chorus girls and late breakfast sure-thing boys. The stiff-lipped manner vanishes.

Everybody chatters. To the stranger the patter seems strange—a medley of half-world phrases turned out weekly by the White Way slang-makers. It is a distinct patois, and when understood as illuminative as any colonel. Nobody seems to know exactly from whence it came.

At this period when Broadway is plumbing for the night the army of musicians in Tuxedo descends on the street for dinner before going to movie houses, restaurants and theaters. Too, there are the out-of-town experimentalists in quest of thrills.

The gambling-house runners look for suckers as well as the cicerones of the dives. Broadway has a tempo different from that of any other time of day. It seems like a small town drifting home to dinner to stop and gossip in the postoffice and drug store.

As a matter of fact it is the hour when the real Broadwayits relax and are themselves. The rest of the town is preparing for the play and other pleasures. The gleaners, the wastrels, the wise guys and smart crackers can slip off their masks and be themselves.

Later on the street stiffens and bristles with sophistication. Sin shows its silk. And Broadway begins to stalk for its prey just as it did in the old ten-twent and thirt years ago.

New York appears to have become taxi-conscious. Very few old ramshackle taxis remain. In the past six months hundreds of new, fast and comfortable cabs have been unloosed. Now it is not unusual for a fare to wave four or five cabs away until one comes along that suits his taste.

BOULDER DAM BILL MAY BLOCK CLOSE

New Tax Cut Measure Goes to Conference; Senate Holds Down Total

Washington, May 23—The new tax reduction bill, which the Senate held within the treasury limit of $294,000,000 after the House authorized a $350,000,000 slash, was sent to conference today while administration leaders revived hopes of adjourning congress next Saturday night.

The Boulder Dam bill, likely to pass the house in a day or two, but facing a desperate filibuster in the Senate, and a final settlement of the tax differences between the two branches, also stood between Congress and adjournment at the end of the week. Failing to get Congress homeward bound by May 26, administration leaders will set May 29 as the date for ending the present session.

The new tax reduction bill, as it passed both House and Senate, carried no reduction in the normal income taxes but granted heavy relief to corporations. The general public was benefited by increased exemptions on amusement taxes, lightening of the club dues tax and repeal of the automobile tax. An effort to repeal and another to reduce the federal inheritance tax was defeated.

A number of efforts to attach farm relief and tariff legislation to the bill as "riders," were rejected by the senate.

Bald Heads!

We Grow Your Hair

I want to interview bald-headed men or men getting bald or thin. I want to interview the "Show Me" kind—the kind that believe that all hair growing methods and preparations are fakes. I'll show you a way to grow real hair on a real bald head. My method will make the most skeptical sit up and take notice. I don't ask you to believe—all I ask you to do is come and see. Long years of study and research perfected my hair growing method. In the last three years some of the most prominent men in the country have successfully regrown their hair by following my method. It will do as much for you. Your scalp is no different than any other. A couple minutes daily in the privacy of your own home—you treat yourself. The cost is small and results will amaze you. Just follow my instructions and try them, to do anything but regrow your hair. No matter what your hair or scalp trouble is, come along my friend. Perhaps you have been disappointed many times but Jack Doyle will not disappoint you. Be bald no longer! Regrow your hair now. You have the opportunity.

"Konjola Was The Medicine I Had Always Needed?"

Says Another Man; Free Of Stomach And Liver Troubles

MR. JOHN C. RAPP

"Konjola made a wonderful change in my condition after two years of suffering," said Mr. John C. Rapp, 309 Wood Street, Piqua, Ohio.

"My work caused me to stand up for eight and ten hours a day and finally I became completely rundown. My sides ached constantly and the small of my back caused me intense misery. It seemed that pains affected my entire lower limbs. Then my stomach began bothering me and I never could digest my food properly. I was told this condition came from constipation but strong laxatives had no affect on me. Every meal caused me to bloat up with gas that pressed against my heart making me very dizzy.

"This was my condition when I started taking Konjola and within a very short time I began feeling better. I have completed a treatment and feel like my real self again. My liver is normal and all the pains in my sides and limbs are gone. Konjola regulated the stomach organs, and I never suffer from after eating pains. My bowels are regular and I don't have to take a laxative any more. Konjola was the medicine I had always needed and I am glad to indorse it to anyone who needs a medicine."

Konjola is different than any other known remedy in this section. It contains twenty-two juices extracted from natural plants which invigorate the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels to a more healthy action. The effect of Konjola on the entire system brings amazing relief in cases of suffering that had been going on for years. At the same time many weak and rundown systems have been restored to a new state of health through this compound. Such a vast number of men and women in this city have told of their experience with this new medical product until now Konjola is the most highly indorsed medicine that is known in this vicinity.

Konjola is strongly recommended here in Marion at Stump & Sams Pharmacy, and is also being sold by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this region.—Adv.

Meditations of a Married Woman

BY HELEN ROWLAND
"Don'ts" for Foolish Virgin

THERE are "eight ways to win a husband," according to Homer Croy in Smart Set Magazine. Yes, and by the same token, there are about eighteen ways to lose him on the way to the altar.

• • •

Here are a few "Don'ts" for the Foolish Virgin, who has won her man and wants to hold onto him, until the Hope Chest is ready and the orange blossoms arrive.

• • •

1. Don't EMOTE over him.

One of the hardest things for a man to bear with in woman is her unpardonable way of deluging him with her emotions. The woman he loves best and longest is the one who loves him just enough! Just enough to make him happy—and not enough to make him tired.

• • •

2. Don't shock his illusions.

Every man loves a "lady." Every man loves, not a woman, but an ideal creature made in her image; and he will forgive a woman for anything on earth except for shattering this image. He may "fall for" a high powered, petting, swearing, jazzing girl—but he catches his balance before he reaches the altar.

• • •

3. Don't SMOTHER him with the idea that you are "mothering" him.

Don't try to keep tabs on him. Don't elect yourself his conscience, curfew, jailer and questionnaire. More love has been stifled to death with solicitation and strangled to death with coddling than ever was frozen to death with neglect.

• • •

4. Don't PURSUE him.

Love is a minuet in which when one takes a step forward the other always takes a step backward. One unsolicited telephone call has often been the fire extinguisher which put out the freshly lighted spark of a man's love.

• • •

5. Don't TALK him to death.

The woman who can babble eloquently in seven languages doesn't stand a chance beside the woman who can listen eloquently in one language. Most men fall in love through their eyes—and out of it through their ears! A woman's illusions may be starved to death—but a man's are nearly always talked to death.

• • •

6. Don't be TOO "efficient."

A man may admire a capable, independent girl who insists on carrying her own gripe, running her own car and paying her own taxi fare. But it is his primitive instinct to love the helpless little thing who leans on him, looks up to him—and keeps him busy DOING things for her.

• • •

7. Don't ask him WHY he loves you, IF he loves you, how MUCH he loves you, or how LONG he will love you. By the time he has found the answer he will have lost the enthusiasm. The only way to take love, medicine or religion is to swallow them with your eyes shut—and no questions.

• • •

8. Don't be JEALOUS. Jealousy is the serpent in Love's Garden of Eden—and Suspicion is its twin sister. One jealous glance will do more to kill love than the breaking of the Ten Commandments.

• • •

Remember that the feat of a girl's life is no longer getting a husband—it's holding onto him after she's got him!

CHAPTER 35

FIFTEEN men descended upon the Bentley home and found chairs and table on the secluded back porch. "Hey, ma'," the sheriff shouted, "the customers are here."

Mrs. Bentley promptly appeared with the spoons, and while the visitors solemnly toasted the lady and proceeded to make short work of the first julep to make way for the second, Garland went to the sheriff's telephone, called up Monica Dale and acquainted her with the result of his operations to date.

He was rewarded by her announcement that he was a sweet Tony. When he returned to the back porch the second round of juleps was well on its way to oblivion and conversation had briskened up considerably, with everybody in a joyous mood. Judge Kenly raised his glass as Garland returned.

"Success to crime," declared.

"Mud in your eye," Garland replied.

"You fellers quit your chaterin'," Bentley commanded. "You make more noise than a colony of crows. Gents, I'm giving a toast. Here's to Monica Dale, the only woman on earth that ever made a fool out of yours truly. God bless her."

"Amen!" came the husky chorus.

"And here," said Jim Kirby, the memory of his great loss still upon him, "is long life and happiness to a most successful and gallant horse-thief."

"Somebody's been talkin'," Bentley protested, and grinned broadly. "Well, I guess it won't hurt me, once old Bob gets in the clear again—as he's sure bound to, but—you listen to me! From now until I die there'll be folks in this county mean enough to say Bob never stole Baldy a-tall, but that I give him the horse to make his getaway, and the proposition back-fired owin' to the act of God."

Anthony Garland then related the amusing details of Mason's escape, and the sheriff was compelled to put up with a deal of merry chaffing. After the third julep one of the jurymen, an old placer miner from Scott Valley, commenced to weep as he recalled the virtues of Uncle Charley Canfield; so Bentley, realizing that with the fourth julep a movement would probably be organized to canonize Bob Mason and might reasonably lead to a scandal in his administration ,announced he had done enough law-breaking to last him for years and ordered everybody to disperse.

As Garland, Kirby, and the judge walked back to the hotel the judge said: "Do you know, Garland, that Bentley mortgaged his little home to buy a brace of trained bloodhounds for the sheriff of Shasta County? He felt he had to make good on the pair Monica Dale killed to save Mason from recapture."

"Some day," Garland promised, "Monica Dale or Bob Mason or I will lift that mortgage for the sheriff."

That night he went to San Francisco and the following day appeared before a meeting of the parole board. Briefly he outlined the business which brought him there and, departing, he left with the clerk of the board a copy of the testimony taken in the trial of Robert Lee Mason and the affidavits of Bentley, Nott, Jim Kirby, Judge Kenly and the 10 jurymen.

He remained in San Francisco a few days, visiting old friends, and started back to Siskiyou on Friday night. As he came down the ramp of the ferry at Oakland pier and strolled toward the train; a heavy hand fell on his shoulder; turning he found himself gazing into the tanned, humorous face of Sheriff Bentley.

"Hello, old settler," Garland greeted him. "Homeward bound, too?"

"Purest thing you know—and not empty-handed, either." The sheriff's great paw reached and out grasped by the arm a stout, well-dressed man who walked beside him. "Mr. Jethroe," he boomed, "meet my friend and associate in crime, Mr. Anthony Garland."

Jethroe favored the ex-ranger with a wintry nod and a brief stare; then his gaze shifted and was held straight before him.

"Fast work," Garland murmured approvingly.

"Well, when you got a thing to do the thing to do is to do it, son. The judge told me I'd better round up the grand jury the day after you left, so I done it, and once we got 'em in the jury room it didn't take 'em long to bring in the indictment.

"The minute the indictment had been drawn up and signed by the foreman, he took it over to Judge Kenly, Jim Kirby issued the warrant, and I come down and served it. Mr. Jethroe's a bit mystified and says it's all a horrible mistake, and meble it is. If so, I reckon he'll straighten us all out on that point pretty pronto."

"I suppose you're in on this conspiracy, Garland," Jethroe charged harshly. "I understand you used to be a lawyer."

"You bet I am, Jethroe—up to my eyebrows."

"Well, when I get through with you—"

"You'll be a much older man than you are, not quite so fat and with much of the conceit and arrogance missing from your cosmos," Garland interrupted him.

They were at their destination late the following afternoon. It was Saturday, and McNaughton, John Thurlow's successor in charge of the Hercules operations at Dogwood Flats, in response to a telegram sent him by Jethroe when Bentley served the warrant met the party at the station with an automobile.

"The judge has gone fishing, Mr. Jethroe," he informed his chief, "and nobody appears to know where. I haven't been able to find him and induce him to set the amount of your bail. I have the $50,000 that your lawyer telegraphed the bank here for that purpose, however."

Jethroe's face went pale green; he turned to Bentley with a look of terror and helplessness. "You're not going to put me in jail until the judge returns, are you, Sheriff?" he asked.

"Seguro, amigo," the genial Bentley replied. "You didn't have no scruples about sendin' Bob Mason to the pen, did you? You lied like hell to make sure he'd get there, didn't you? At least, the indictment says you did—or hints it, at any rate." He paused dramatically. "I'm Bob Mason's friend," he said with flat finality, and with a hand on his prisoner's arm, propelled him gently toward the waiting automobile.

"Most generally men of your caliber manage to beat the game, but while I got the power I aim to give you a small taste o' what you gave Bob Mason. And quit your whimperin', you overgrown baby. Hell's fire, how I hate a grown man that weeps!"

"It's a frame-up," Jethroe half shrieked. "I won't get justice in this county. I'll apply for a change of venue."

"Don't trouble. You won't get it. You'll be tried on the evidence presented by yourself, and if there's twelve men on your jury who don't vote you guilty you can blame the judge or the district attorney or the jury."

[illegible] car sped up-town to the county jail.

"Bad news?" Bentley queried amiably, as his prisoner, ushered into the jail office, sat down heavily in the first convenient chair. Jethroe swallowed twice, but made no answer. "It looks like a hard head to beat, if you ask me," the sheriff continued. "Dang it, I tell you a feller can't be too careful what he puts in writin.' A feller can shoot his mouth off in front of a dozen witnesses and then deny he ever said a word and set up a claim he's bein' framed by a lot o' blackmailers, but when his John Hancock is there to prove he did one thing, and a court record says he swore he never done it, it certainly looks like I'm going to have to take another trip to San Quentin or Folsom with a felon."

"I have no doubt you'll enjoy the journey," Jethroe rasped.

"Well, once in a while I do get a kick out o' this sorry job of mine," Bentley admitted grimly. "Well, I got you registered in my hotel, Mr. Jethroe, so if you'll pick up your bag—sorry we ain't got a bell-hop—the jailer here will show you to your room. Twixt what you're used to but it's the worst we got, Jim," he said, turning to the smiling jailer, "you don't happen to have picked up a couple of Indians or drunken sheep-herders while I been away, have you?"

Jim confessed he had a minor with delirium tremens and a Modoc held in the account with forgot to tell.

"Turn 'em in with Mr. Jethroe," Bentley ordered. "The gentleman's right low in his spirits and will appreciate company to keep him amused. He won't hold a candle to the jolly Modoc lodger, of course, but you can't [illegible] and the jolly don't always help."

[illegible] Jethroe followed Jim through the door that led to the cells, and Bentley, seating himself at the desk, proceeded to write out a receipt for the $50,000 bail. "There you are, Garland," he said, passing the paper over to his friend. "Now you can go and tell Bob Mason he's a free man. You can tell him I'm sorry I had to put him through all that hell, but I had to be sure. I'm glad I was sure before I let him go, because I'm sure now. Tell him I'm sorry I ever made him suffer, and tell him I'm glad I'm the one that's going to get the credit for his pardon. Tell him I'm glad I'm the one that's going to get the credit for his pardon. Tell him I'm glad I'm the one that's going to get the credit for his pardon.
